

#In10Tweets: Microsoft Assistant General Counsel Dennis Garcia

Technology, Privacy, and eCommerce

Microsoft Assistant General Counsel Dennis Garcia has many roles — including an active Twitter user. Even though Twitter is an established social media platform, many lawyers still don't have a strong Twitter presence. We want to inspire more in-house counsel to use this platform to help them advance their career.

Twitter can help you discover the latest legal developments, share your thoughts on the latest legal trends, or share tidbits about who you are and what you're passionate about — all things potential employers and recruiters look for. To demonstrate Twitter's versatility and usefulness, here are 10 of Garcia's best tweets.

He is a devoted family man. No matter what, he prioritizes spending time with his family, including his young son. Garcia also supports lifting the stigma of paternity leave in professional industries, including the legal industry.
